UCLA Faculty on Tour

Andrea M. Ghez, professor of Physics & Astronomy and Lauren B. Leichtman & Arthur E. Levine chair in Astrophysics, is one of the world’s leading experts in observational astrophysics and heads UCLA's Galactic Center Group. Her groundbreaking work has provided the best evidence to date for the existence of supermassive black holes and has opened a new approach to understanding these exotic objects. In 2020 Andrea was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics by the Royal Swedish Academy of Science. She has received numerous other honors and awards including the Bakerian Medal from the Royal Society of London, a MacArthur Fellowship, election to the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts & Sciences, and the American Philosophical Society.

Journey highlights:
- Experience the wonder of Charles Darwin’s revolutionary observations of this remarkable world unto itself—home to reptiles, birds, plants, and aquatic life that exist nowhere else on the planet.
- Enjoy the astounding biodiversity of the UNESCO-inscribed Galápagos archipelago, preserved much as it was when Spanish colonists arrived in 1535.
- Climb Prince Philip’s Steps on Genovesa Island to see colonies of masked boobies, frigate birds, and storm petrels, or enjoy a panga ride along the cliffs.
- Embark on a nature hike on North Seymour Island and explore Sullivan Bay on Santiago Island, a volcanic landscape that offers a glimpse into islands’ geologic history.
- Discover Punta Mangle on Fernandina Island, home to unique mangrove forests that provide nesting sites for flightless cormorants and Galápagos penguins.
- Travel to the lush highlands of Santa Cruz Island to experience the beauty of its unique climate and lava tunnels.
- Snorkel in Gardner Bay on Española Island to encounter graceful sea turtles and swim alongside playful sea lions.
- Visit the San Cristobal Breeding Center, a conservation site dedicated to the preservation and breeding of endangered species in the Galápagos.
